ITALY ON VERGE OF ENTERING WAR

By Telegram to The Freeman.
Rome, April 21.—Events are moving swiftly and decisive action by Italy may be expected at any moment. All Italian steamers engaged in Trans-Atlantic traffic have been notified not to sail for America unless special permission is granted by the ministry of marine. They will be used as troop transports if Italy enters the war.
Minister of War Zupelli was summoned to the Royal Palace last night and conferred with King Victor Emmanuel for several hours. Upon leaving the palace he hastened to the ministry of war and remained there most of the night.
A special cabinet meeting has been called for Thursday afternoon. What action is to be taken can only be conjectured. The International News Service correspondent today sent a note to Premier Salandra requesting a statement as to whether Italy intended to depart from its attitude of neutrality. It was returned with the stamped reply: "No answer."

ELECTION RESULTS IN ILLINOIS

By Telegram to The Freeman.
Chicago, April 21.—Mrs. A. R. Canfield, aged 74, was elected mayor of Warren, Ill., in yesterday's elections, the first woman to be chosen as the executive of an Illinois city, and Miss Pauline Weidner was elected city treasurer of Menota.
Illinois "dry" captured eleven "wet" towns in option elections, according to returns completed today. Women voters cast the deciding ballots in nearly every municipality where the expulsion of the saloons was the issue. The "wet" forces in every town were on the defensive and managed to retain twelve towns and cities.
An election scandal was brought to light in Paris, Ill., where it was charged women sold their votes for three dollars apiece. Miss Hattie O'Neill and C. Clay Moss, a Democrat leader, were arrested, charged with buying women's votes. Other arrests were promised today. Sheriff McAllister admitted that several warrants had been issued, one of them naming a prominent society woman.
The alleged traffic in women's votes was disclosed when Miss Flora Dawson and Miss Hattie Franklin appeared at the sheriff's office and admitted that they had received $3 each from Miss O'Neill and Moss.
The hottest fight over the saloon issue was waged in Litchfield, which was voted "dry" by 450 votes. The women there voted solidly against the saloons.
One of the notable results of the elections was the expulsion of saloons from three Chicago suburbs, Naperville, Lombard and West Chicago. Elmhurst, another suburb, voted to retain its saloons.
Ottawa, the largest city in La Salle county, was voted "wet" after a bitter campaign had been waged on both sides.
One result of the election was the success of the entire Voliva ticket headed by W. H. Clendenen for mayor of 21st City. In West Hammond, Paul Kamradt, a saloon keeper, was elected mayor over Martin T. Fineran.

Forest Fire in New Hampshire.

By Telegram to The Freeman.
Manchester, N. H., April 21.—Women are helping men fight a great forest fire, that, starting yesterday morning in South Litchfield, has swept over 2,500 acres of woodland in the town of Litchfield, Merrimack and Hudson. A number of farm buildings have been destroyed. The loss is estimated at $100,000. The fire is still spreading, being driven by a high northwest wind. Five hundred men and women are fighting the fire.

MOHAMMEDANS TRY TO INVADE INDIA

By Telegram to The Freeman.
Simla, India, April 21.—Turkey's call for a "Holy War" is bearing fruit. Official announcement was made today that a force of Mohammedan troops tried to invade India from the Afghanistan frontier on April 18. The Mohammedans were driven back with a loss of 150 men.
The official statement follows: "On April 18 a Mohammedan force estimated to number 4,000 men advanced to Hafiz Kor, five miles north-west of Shabkatz with the intention of attacking British territory. These soldiers were fired upon by our patrols in Khaibar Pass.
"A column moved out in the afternoon and successfully engaged the enemy, killing and wounding 150. The enemy then withdrew and is reported dispersing.
"Sir George Roosekoppel received many offers of assistance from leaders of the Peshawar district. The more influential Mullahs refused to countenance the movement and Afghan officials effectually restrained the Mohammedans of Afghanistan from joining it."

VINCENT ASTOR BUYS A FLYING BOAT

Vincent Astor has purchased a flying boat for his personal use, and will probably make trial flights in it within the next few weeks from the Hudson river near his home, Ferncliff, at Rhinebeck, the New York Times was informed last night. The boat is built for two passengers, and it is said that Mrs. Astor intends making flights with her husband, although this has not been positively announced.
If the boat proves a success on the Hudson it is probable that Mr. Astor will take it to Newport this summer. He has had a floating hangar built for the boat, so that it may be towed wherever he desires to take it. When a friend of Mr. Astor's was asked last night where he intended to fly, he replied: "Oh, I think he will fly here and there and everywhere."
Mr. Astor has purchased the boat for sport. It was built by W. Stanley Burgess, the yacht builder, in his yards at Marblehead, Mass. It is now complete, and Mr. Astor will go to Marblehead for it early next week. It is of the Burgess-Dunne type and is the first boat built under the Dunne patents. It has a 100 horsepower engine, set-back wings, and has been especially designed for Mr. Astor, who interested himself in its construction.
One of the features of the boat is that it was built with the idea of "safety first" in mind. Mr. Astor has no intention of becoming a sensational aeronaut, and instructed his designer to make the boat safe rather than speedy. Wherever it has been necessary to sacrifice any point for safety, the sacrifice has been made. But it has not been necessary, it is said, to make the boat either slow or heavy. The builders believe that it will fly high and fast.
The purchase of the boat marks Mr. Astor's first active personal interest in flying, according to report. He has been a member of the Aero Club of America for some years, and has always been interested in the progress of aviation, but hitherto he has not been known to manifest more than a passive interest. Recently, however, he began to express a desire to experience the thrill of flying, and arrangements for the building of the boat were soon made.

The Jitneys are Coming.

In the May American Magazine Hugh S. Fullerton writes an exceedingly interesting little fact article entitled, "The Jitneys are Coming." Following is a brief extract: "Almost every large city in the west and central west, and lines are being started everywhere. The latest reports indicate that there are between eight thousand and nine thousand licensed jitneys operating in these cities. There are two hundred in Los Angeles alone, nearly five hundred in San Francisco, New Orleans is in the hands of the jitney—Denver, Washington, Salt Lake, Milwaukee, Toledo, and now Chicago and Washington. The conquering hosts of jitney busses have swept eastward, overwhelming the entire country and, incidentally, bringing with them new municipal problems that may prove as hard to solve as were the old ones. "The two big problems are congestion of streets and danger of injury. In Kansas City the traffic police and others declare that the jitneys do not congest traffic as much as street cars do, and are easier to handle. Los Angeles already is complaining of congestion of the main downtown streets and danger to pedestrians and shoppers.
"It is evident that before the jitneys are received as an established public service factor some liability insurance must be arranged. The jitneys are operated chiefly by persons of small means, and the danger of personal injury of passengers is to be considered. The street car companies declare the proportion of passengers injured will be larger than in any other form of transportation, and that it will be practically impossible for injured passengers to recover damages."

LAND ATTACK ON THE DARDANELLES

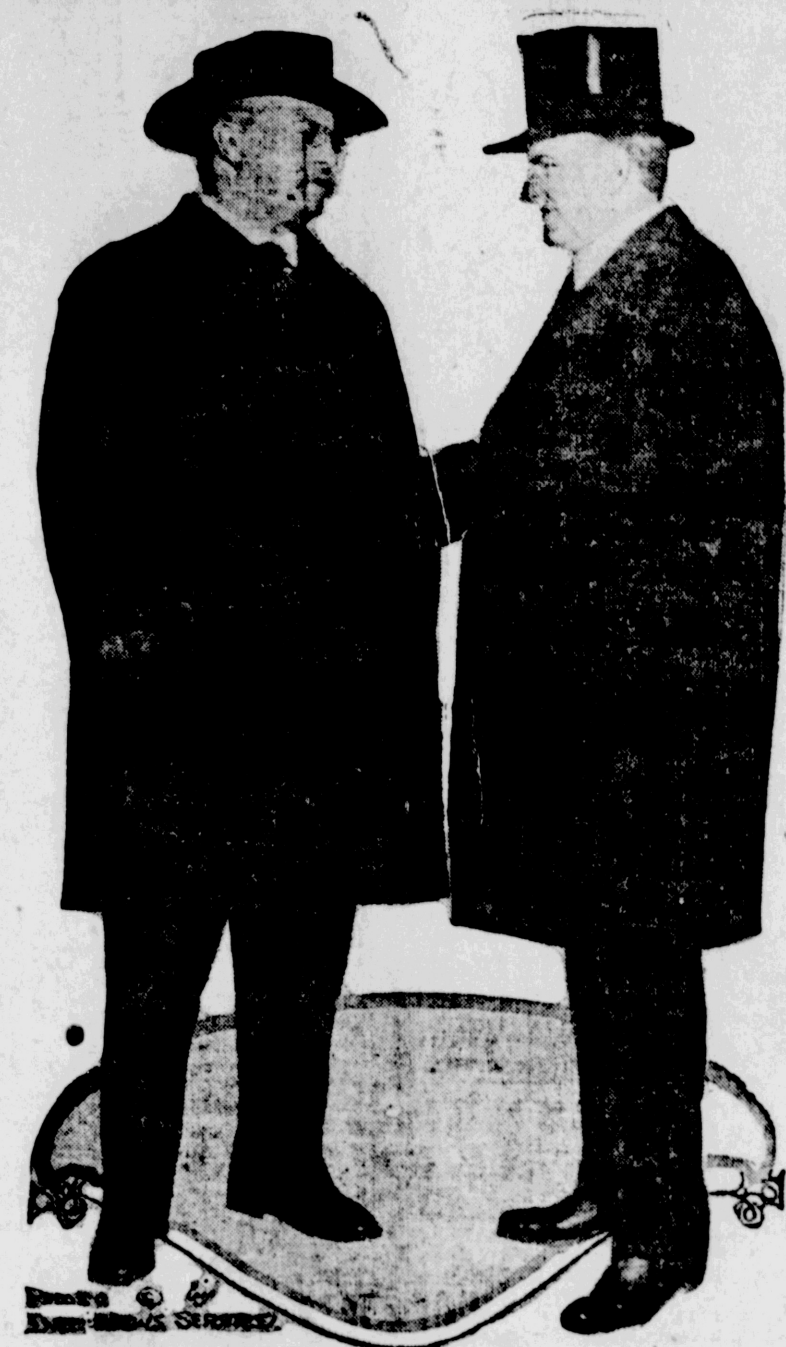

By Telegram to The Freeman.
Berlin, April 21.—(By wireless)—Twenty thousand English and French troops have been landed near Enos, European Turkey, for a land attack upon the Dardanelles forts, according to a heavily censored dispatch printed by the Tages Zeitung. The landing was effected after a heavy cannonade between the Turkish batteries and the allies' warships.
The dispatch printed by the Tages Zeitung was mutilated by the censor who also deleted its place of origin. Another dispatch from Athens says that great activity is noted among the English troops on the island of Lemnos and that troop transports are arriving daily from Alexandria.
The Turkish censorship has been tightened. All indications point to the belief that strong action against the Dardanelles is about to be taken.
Enos is a seaport 47 miles north of the entrance to the Dardanelles. It is connected with Constantinople by railroad branches, of which also run into Gallipoli peninsula.

MAYOR DRAFTS CLARK CANAL BILL

The Delaware and Hudson Re-opening League, of which Captain Clark of Constantia is the father, at a recent meeting asked Mayor Canfield to draft a bill, which he has done and a copy has been sent to Senator Walton and Assemblyman DeWitt today with the request that it be introduced at this session of the legislature if it is not too late. It is understood that the legislature will adjourn on Friday. The bill drafted by Mayor Canfield is brief and reads as follows:
An act to authorize the making of a survey and map of the abandoned Delaware and Hudson canal with a report on its present condition and on the feasibility and advisability of reopening or reconstructing said canal and making an appropriation therefor.
The people of the state of New York, represented in senate and assembly, do enact as follows:
Section 1. The state engineer and surveyor is hereby authorized and directed to prepare from public records now on file and from such survey or surveys as he may deem it necessary to make, a map of the abandoned Delaware and Hudson canal.
Section 2. The state engineer and surveyor is further authorized and directed to transmit said map to the legislature during the session of nineteen hundred and sixteen, with a report of the present condition of said canal and on the feasibility and advisability of reopening or reconstructing the said canal, with his recommendations as to the proper plan or plans necessary to be carried out to reopen or reconstruct said canal, with his estimate of the cost thereof.
Section 3. The sum of ten thousand dollars is hereby appropriated for the purposes specified in this act, out of any moneys in the treasury, not otherwise appropriated, to be paid by the treasurer upon the warrant of the comptroller to the order of the state engineer and surveyor.
Section 4. This act shall take effect immediately.

The Old Time Gospel.

The increasing numbers that attend the Sunday services at the Free Methodist Church on Sterling street indicate that there are still many that enjoy the old time Gospel preaching. The sermon last Sunday night from the text, "Our God whom we serve is able to deliver us from the burning fiery furnace" Daniel 3:17, was one of absorbing interest and power. The contrast between idolatrous and Christian worship was sharply drawn. The necessity of faith that works self denial, and absolute obedience to God's law was clearly shown. The spirit of Nebuchadnezzar in denying the Hebrew children the right to live because they would not serve his gods, or worship the golden image that he set up, was compared with organizations or not, was clearly, and vividly shown to arise from the same tyrannical, and idolatrous spirit. The service was an inspiration to those that put their trust in the God of Heaven, and not in the gods of this world.

FLEET RENEWS BOMBARDMENT

By Telegram to The Freeman.
Constantinople, via Berlin and Amsterdam, April 21.—British and French warships have renewed their attack on the Dardanelles and a great fleet of the allies' transports is maneuvering off the Anatolian coast between Tenedos and Mitylene awaiting a favorable opportunity to land troops.
The bombardment of the Dardanelles forts was resumed late Monday afternoon. Under cover of the warships' fire six torpedo boats attempt to penetrate the Dardanelles, but an official statement issued by the war office today states that they were driven back.
The bombardment was kept up for two hours from the Gulf of Saros and was resumed the next day for more than five hours. A heavy fog then forced the warships to cease their operations.
The official statement from the war office says that two torpedo boats were damaged by the return fire from the Turkish forts and that one is believed to have been sunk.
Five battleships and seven cruisers comprised the attacking fleet in the operations of Monday and Tuesday.

TAKE THE HIGHWAYS OUT OF POLITICS

By Telegram to The Freeman.
Albany, April 21.—Aiming to have the state constitution amended that a better system of administering the department of highways may result, the New York State Automobile Association has started a campaign to this end and its officers have already laid their plan before the delegates.
The political control of the state highway department is struck at by automobile association in so many words. It asks that even though such control cannot be entirely eliminated it be minimized at least.
In arguing for the taking out of politics of the highway department this argument is used:
"The department is at the present time carrying out the largest public improvement in the world and therefore we should be able to attract to it the very highest grade of engineering talent in the world to take up the work for us."
"The great difficulty, however, in accomplishing this, is the constant changes in the administration of this department. In fact, it has reached a point where the chief heads of our highway department, during the past few years, have been changed on an average of almost every year."
It is the contention of the New York State Automobile Association membership that since no business can be carried on in an efficient and successful manner under such circumstances, unfavorable results must follow the juggling of officials who are put in charge of the highway department.
"We ask," is the plea of the members of the association, "that this subject be given careful consideration by the delegates to the constitutional convention and see if some plan cannot be developed and carried to completion whereby we will be able to attract to our state highway work the very highest grade of engineers and also the very highest grade of contractors. In our estimation the only way this can be accomplished and carried on permanently is to place the highway department entirely outside of the control of the various political parties, if such a thing is possible, and to also make the position of highways one of permanency."

Local Branch of Telephone Society Meets at the Y. M. C. A.

On Tuesday evening the local telephone men enjoyed a banquet at the Y. M. C. A. banquet hall, to which sixty members of Kingston branch of the New York Telephone Society and several visitors sat down. The singers were accompanied by Prof. Malsenholder. The committee for planning the evening's enjoyment was composed of R. D. Clearwater, J. E. Drum, G. E. MacNabb, C. W. Snyder and G. E. McLane.
The following was the menu served: Routine Soup, Short Circuit, Saltines, Grounded Celery, Non Payment Olives, Bell Pickles, Submarine Fish, Traffic Chicken Pie, Farmer Line Potatoes with Parsley, Transcontinental Peas, Phantom Try-Phosa, Called in Error Biscuit, Heat Cell Cake, Stockholders' Ice Cream, Society Cigars, Clear-Water Coffee.
Swarthout Not Guilty.
A trial was held in recorder's court at the city hall on Tuesday night in the case of The People against William Swarthout. The defendant was arrested on complaint of F. E. Weber for stealing tools from his place of business downtown. The defense was that Swarthout had been in the habit of taking tools to do work for the concern and had not returned them after his discharge. He was represented by Andrew J. Cook and the trial lasted until long after midnight. At the completion of the case the defendant was found not guilty and was discharged.

PROHIBITIONIST SAVES WATER WAGON

The water wagon of William P. Low broke down this morning when the nut on the rear wheel worked loose and fell off, but the missing nut was found and restored to Mr. Low by the Rev. Dr. P. N. Chase, secretary of the water wagon adherents, the Prohibition party, in Ulster county. Mr. Low has the job of sprinkling the uptown business streets and while driving by the Kingston Club on Fair street the nut fell off. The wagon proceeded as far as John street when the wheel also came off and the wagon collapsed. The wagon was emptied of its load of water and repairs made, after blocking traffic for a short time.

THEY SIGNED AND NOW REFUSE TO PAY

The value of the promise of a number of Kingstonians will be determined by the guarantors of the Chautauqua lecture and entertainment course which opens at the new high school auditorium tonight.
The guarantors have found that a number of men who subscribed for Chautauqua course tickets a year ago, at the close of the Chautauqua course held at that time in this city, have refused to accept their tickets or to redeem the pledges made then.
At the close of the entertainment and lecture course a year ago, blanks were passed around and signed by many Kingstonians. The blanks were as follows:
SUBSCRIPTION FOR CHAUTAUQUA TICKETS.
1914.
I hereby subscribe for—Chautauqua Season Tickets, at Two Dollars ($2.00) each, for which I agree to pay the local Chautauqua Committee, or The Chautauqua Association of Pennsylvania, when the tickets are delivered to me.
Signed _____
Address _____
With the names of men prominent in business or professional life to the number of several hundred, signed to these pledges, a local committee of thirty-two men became guarantors of the Chautauqua course.
Recently when the guarantors began to deliver the tickets to the signers of the pledges, they found a number who were unwilling to keep their pledge. Out of 400 signers, about 250 refused to keep faith with the guarantors. Most of the wavers are of the loud-mouthed variety who wonder why Kingston is not more prosperous. They have given no reason for their refusal to keep their word, but depend on their position in the community to support their contention that they are not required to take their tickets, in spite of their pledge.

For the Children

Little John Jacob Astor
is a Sturdy Youngster.

© 1915, by American Press Association.

Among the children of the rich who may be seen almost any pleasant day playing in Central park, New York city, none attracts more attention than little John Jacob Astor. When he goes on his rambles he is accompanied by a corps of nurses to guide his footsteps and guard him from harm. Baby Astor is now just a month past two and a half years of age and in the photograph is a sturdy and handsome youngster. His father, Colonel John Jacob Astor, was lost on the ill fated Titanic, which went down on April 14, 1912. His mother, formerly Miss Madeleine Force, was rescued. Mrs. Astor, who devotes much of her time to the care of her child, is an advocate of the open air treatment of children, and so Baby John has grown lusty and healthy. In the summer he spends his days at Bar Harbor, Me. He will have a great many millions of dollars when he grows up.

Pussy, Come Walk.

This game, which is sometimes called "invisible cats," is one of the numerous amusements in which a particular player has to be guided by the acuteness and accuracy of the sense of hearing. One player is blindfolded and seated in a chair in the middle of the room. At a call from him of "Pussy, come, walk," each of the company passes before him in turn. When the walker reaches the chair he utters a "mew, mew," and the blindfolded player has to try to identify the speaker by his voice. Should he succeed, the other takes his place; should he fail, the signal is repeated, and another cat comes forward. Players may, if they choose, disguise the voice in saying "mew," but it is difficult enough to recognize the natural voice, and to add to the difficulty retards the game, and it is apt to grow tedious if played slowly.

A Plea For the Birds.

Don't kill the little birds that sing on high and tree
All through the summer days their sweetest melody
Don't shoot the little birds; the earth is God's estate
And he provideth food for small as well as great.

Don't kill the little birds, whose plumage wings the air
Whose song at early morn makes music everywhere
What though the cherries fall, half eaten from the stem
And berries disappear in garden, field and glen.

Still, like the widow's crust, there's always plenty left
How sad a world were this of little birds bereft
Think of the good they do in all the orchards round
No harmful insects thrive where robins most abound.

Don't kill the little birds that sing on high and tree
All through the summer days their sweetest melody
In this great world of ours, if we can trust his word
There's food enough for all. Don't kill a single bird.

To Get Rid of Fleas.

Rand forms the best surface on which to expose garments or bedding infested with fleas. If the sunlight is strong enough to raise the temperature of the sand to 120 degrees the fleas will be destroyed within an hour, provided there is no vegetation or shade where they can take refuge.

How Many Yards of Muslin in a Bale of Cotton?

A couple months ago there was a general cry, "Help the South, Buy a Bale of Cotton!" We bought a bale and had a southern mill weave it into one continuous piece of 76-inch-wide sheeting. The sheeting is now on display in our window.

How many yards of sheeting did the bale of cotton make? From Wednesday, April 21, to Saturday, May 1st, we will give one estimate with every 25c purchase, and the person estimating nearest the number of yards we will give FIVE DOLLARS IN GOLD; the next nearest we will give A FIVE DOLLAR DOLL; third nearest, $2.50 in merchandise; to the fourth, fifth and sixth, $1.00 in merchandise anywhere in the store.

The number of yards the roll contains will be kept an absolute secret. Not even our salespeople will know until the day the guesses are counted. Merchants and salespeople in stores that carry dry goods not eligible to guess.

There will be no limit to the number of guesses. You can register a different guess for each 25c purchase. During this guessing contest we will put on sale at specially reduced prices all cotton goods made in the south. You will not only run a chance of getting one of the prizes by buying here during this sale, but you will save from 15 to 25 per cent on staple and wanted merchandise.

SUSPICIONS MAKE WAR.

War brings changes to more people than those living in the countries that are fighting each other. Commercially, socially, intellectually, financially and in a score of other ways do the people of the entire world find it necessary to adjust themselves to changed conditions resulting from warfare between small nations. Much greater, therefore, will be the readjustment before the conclusion of the European conflict now raging. The war talk of jingoes in Japan and the United States over the prospect of war between the island kingdom and the American Republic had not died down when the European cyclone burst on Belgium. In the United States, the war talk was renewed when Japan became an ally of England for the purpose of driving Germany from China, and the cry was raised that we must protect ourselves from the aggressive Japs. Now it appears from the talk of Dr. Shaller Matthews, of the University of Chicago, who has just returned from Japan, that the friendship of Japan and the United States actually is threatened not because of any overt act, but because of an "accumulating mass of mutual suspicion, born of irrational misunderstanding, implicit commercial rivalry, professional mischief makers and overheated rhetoric." Suspicion breeds suspicion.

The countries of Europe have been suspicious of each other for generations, and political or commercial expediency nearly always has dictated the policy of each country in the selection of its allies. There has been an absence of actual sympathy between the governments of Europe and no bond has been strong enough to bind nations together against the hatred engendered by suspicion and envy. There has been an improvement of such conditions and the Allies today are bound together by closer ties than have knit any European government for many years, but even now there are intimations that when the present conflict ends—no matter what its outcome may be—the nations allied in a common cause may find it necessary to leap at each other's throats for self preservation, real or fancied. The history of the world is made up of episodes like this.

The United States alone has succeeded in keeping clear of alliances of this character, and its foreign policy has been one difficult for foreign nations to batter down. Such a policy has been an element of strength to America, and it followed consistently cannot help resulting in continuing prosperity for the American people. As civilization advances it must in time adopt the American policy. The growth of civilization is slow, but America leads.

A Brooklyn man, thirty-five years old, convicted of stealing $35, has been sentenced in the Kings county court to twenty-five years' imprisonment. He had been tried twice before. Once he was acquitted of murder and once convicted of a hold-up for which he was sentenced to forty years' imprisonment. The conviction for hold-up was reversed by the appellate court because identification was not satisfactory. The police record of this man may be bad and in private life he may have developed demoralized tendencies, but such sentences as this do not increase respect for the judges who impose them. There are crimes for which a twenty-five year term in prison is inadequate, and the surrounding circumstances and the character of the defendant may make it desirable to have imposed a severe sentence in this case. Certain forms of homicide are punishable by terms of imprisonment which appear to be light. We ridicule the Puritans for their excessive penalties for offenses which to us appear mild, but we approve long terms of prison-life for habitual criminals because we are told by students of sociology that their criminal tendencies are incurable and society owes a duty to itself to prevent the opportunity for recurrence of crimes by such men. The Puritans may have known their own criminal element and the best methods of dealing with it far better than we do today. Criminology is not an exact science. Opposed to the stern believers in harsh punishment for all offenders is a mawkishly-sentimental tal element which believes in furnishing criminals with elderdown cushions and tango teas. As between these extremes the old Puritans seem to have adopted a middle course. Each age must judge its own needs but each age should endeavor at least to be consistent. The present age seems to have lost sight of consistency, and the offender against property appears more of a criminal than the offender against rights, morals or the public welfare.

JUST COURTESY.

(By Our Woman Editor.)

A little chap of seven merry years extended me the fine compliment of a state call the other day, and from the moment he extended his small hand in response to a word of welcome until he left, with a shy expression indicative of his pleasure, his innate courtesy was beautifully manifest. It was not mere politeness of the brand that is taught; it was the inborn something that animates even the little acts and words into genuine courtesy and always calls forth a responsive thrill.

In him, the gracious showing did not need to be instilled; like "Topsy" it "just grew;" and was part of him, a very delightful and happy part, which will help smooth and brighten the way wherever he goes, both for him and for all who travel his way. For there is something that warms the very cockles of one's heart when one chances to be favored with a special bit of courtesy. And when it comes spontaneously from a child, it lightens a whole day and leaves a memory that never grows dim.

And one invariably finds herself thinking ahead to the time when the little chap—if little chap he be—shall have taken his place in the social world, the business world, the world of infinite varieties. And one sees, for him, many big barriers burned away, just by reason of the beautiful growth of courtesy that remains perennially green whenever, wherever, it exists in its purity.

My first recollection of a boy, since grown into man's estate without the loss of one iota of his original endowment of courtesy, was the impulsive "Oh, Miss Frances, let me open that door for you!" The act and the words, of themselves, meant not a thing in particular, but in the attempt to express the graciousness, the full measure of courtesy, a mere pen falter.

It is not the big affairs of life which offer the greatest opportunities for the display of this trait of traits. In the ordinary, every-day happenings where folk closely touch elbows—and often become rather ruffled in the process—there is even more need of the bright word of cheer, the gracious act in passing and the nameless little services that constitute courtesy and elevate a simple display of thoughtfulness to the kind of knightliness that counts in a tired, hustling world.

Women, particularly, are so appreciative of the small attentions that cost little effort and yield abundant return, that it should be instinctive to lead the small boy and girl in ways that in their fruition speak eloquently of a rich, warm, nature underneath.

But, indeed, it is not women alone who respond to the courtesy they meet on their way, for there's the big world of business, too.

What is it that makes the head of a great concern keep his eye on the humble office boy who persistently finds ways to let his native courtesy bubble up till it overflows? Nothing in the world but appreciation of the practical fact that his business mightily needs men who pause in the work of the day to extend a gracious word, men who know how to approach prospective customers' or patrons of one sort or another in an agreeable fashion, men who actually win trade, and the friends that go with it by the impelling quality of courtesy. And often and often the office boy travels onward and upward until he stands head and shoulders above all who looked down upon him at the start. His education is gleaned here, there, everywhere; but he gets it somehow, and all the while his courtesy is helping him win his battles.

Who can measure the depth and breadth of success when success is won in the face of heaviest odds? When money, influence and power, or exceeding brain force, are eliminated, what is left but human traits? And it is unseeing folk indeed who can look about in every walk and way of life and fail to be impressed with the glad fact that human traits, of the kindly, helpful variety, are worth more than marked ability or special training, unaided by these great natural assets.

And since all of us want to be successful, whatever our special ambition in life, want to be gracious, lovable, feted, courted and useful, is it not strange, past believing, that we devote so little time and energy to the cultivation of the very traits that would help us to win? For those traits that we admire so much—yes, even envy sometimes—are not half so elusive as they seem.

One little woman of my acquaintance is naturally sharp, quick, quite aggressive and irritable; but, except in rare periods of sudden temper, she has toned herself down and cultivated a spirit of graciousness, a ready impulse to please and a kindly showing of interest in everybody about her that have made her not only a delightful companion in her hours of play, but a very resourceful, dependable addition to the business to which she daily adds grace and practical help.

And, you know, there are some mighty bad, rough spots in the highway of life that sadly need to be softened by something.

Blessing Goes Wrong.

Stories are numerous of errors made by operators in sending telegraphic messages. How a blessing went wrong is thus related by the New York correspondent of The Pittsburgh Dispatch: Speaking of errors made in the transmission of messages sent by wire, a telegraph operator today told of a blessing that a minister sent by wire the other day and when it was received at the other end it proved to be a blow. "This dear old Methodist minister," he said, "came in and sent this telegram to a conference that had assigned him to a charge. 'Acts 20, 22.' He explained that the citation was: 'And now, brethren, I commend you to God.' Well, the careless operator at the other end handed the message to the conference so that it read: 'Acts 23, 2.' That text, the bewildered conference found on reference to the Bible, reads: 'And the high priest Ananias commanded them who stood by to smite him on the mouth.'"

The Modern Novel.

Laura Jean Libbey, the novelist, said of modern letters at a Brooklyn tea:

"Modern letters the modern novel tend to be too cynical and materialistic. The typical modern love story might be epitomized in a dialogue like this:

"One more kiss. How beautiful you are to-night, dear Hannah. Can you cook?"

"No, Harrington. But, oh, how I love you! Kiss me again. And tell me, could you afford, dear, a motor car and a cottage at Atlantic City?"

"No, dearest Hannah. Now one more."

"And so they didn't marry, and lived happily ever afterward."—New York Times.

The Sign.

At a country fair in Jersey one of the fastest visitors sat down in a pavilion to rest her weary feet for a moment. She couldn't imagine why everyone who passed was so amused. Since she is very sensitive on the subject of her size, she concluded it was the cause of this amusement, and so she decided to search for a less conspicuous seat. She glanced around and saw that she had been sitting in front of the guessing cake table directly under the placard: "Guess my weight and I am yours."—New York Globe.

Artful Tommy.

Private Tommy Sims had had pneumonia and had been for some time in the hospital, where they treated him so well that he was much averse to the prospect of being discharged as cured.

One day the doctor was taking his temperature, and while Tommy had the thermometer in his mouth the doctor moved on, and happened to turn his back. Tommy saw his chance. He pulled the thermometer out of his mouth and popped it into a cup of hot tea, replacing it at the first sign of the doctor's turning. When that worthy examined the thermometer he looked first at Tommy and then back at the thermometer and gasped:

"Well, my man, you're not dead, but you ought to be!"—Philadelphia Public Ledger.

Easily Spotted.

"The Germans are distributing a lot of iron crosses. Apropos of this the Belgians tell a story.

The speaker was F. O. Hensl, Belgian consul to Pittsburgh. "They say," he resumed, "that a German landwehr man disappeared, and the authorities sought some means of identifying him.

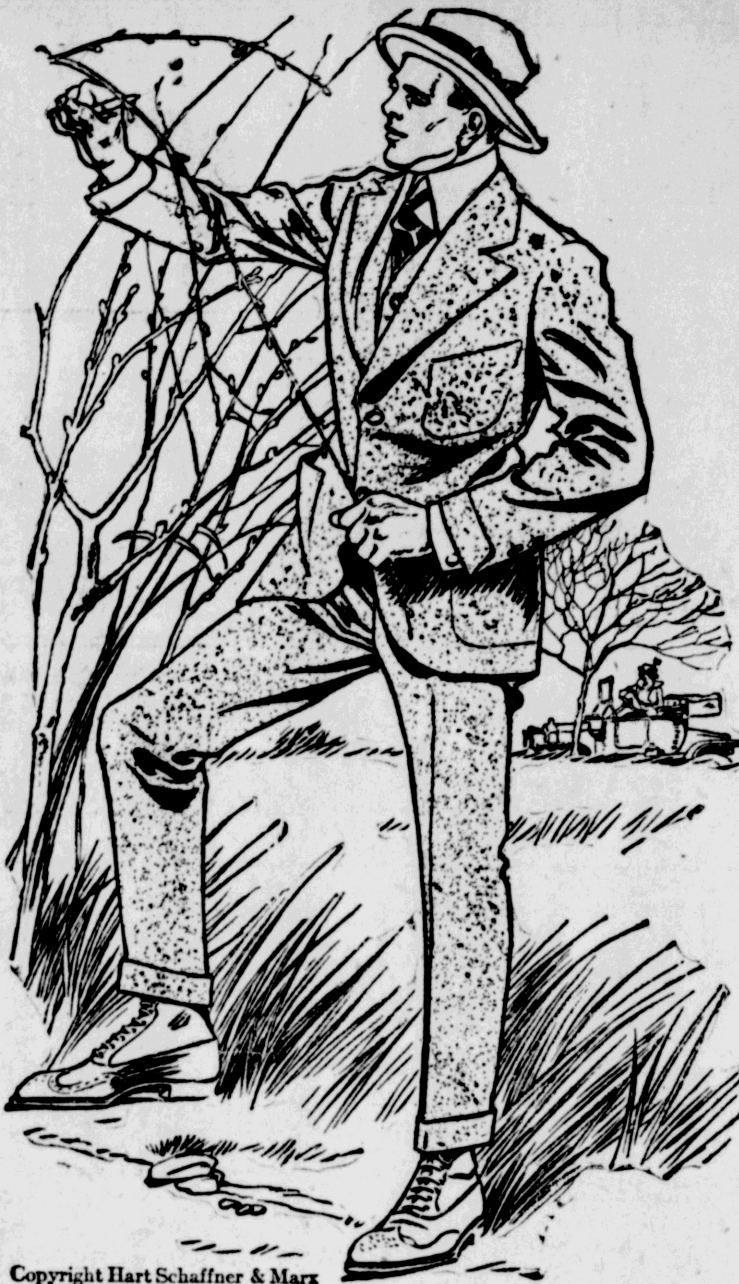

"Oh, as to identification, a landwehr officer said, 'that will be easy. He is the only man in the landwehr who doesn't wear an iron cross.'"

Gerow Attempted Suicide.

George Gerow, aged 33 years, attempted suicide on Tuesday morning at New Paltz by shooting himself twice in the head. Both bullets took effect above the right ear. His condition is critical and Dr. Coddington, who is in attendance, thinks his chances for recovery are very slight. Some time ago the young man started a fruit and grocery business on Main street and was out during the day soliciting orders. He then went to his father's house and shot himself. Gerow was married about a year ago to Miss Nellie Poucher, daughter of A. A. Poucher, and apparently they were happy. Although conscious he refused to make any statement as to why he did the rash act.

Trees Along the Aqueduct.

William Zimmerman is in charge of a force of men which is setting out trees along the Ashokan aqueduct between Bonticou and New Hurley. They were grown at Shokan and are of the Scotch pine, white pine and red spruce. The trees are set eight feet apart and planted where there is too much rock for grass to grow.

Bang! Goes Ambition.
Another pathetic little feature of everyday life is the way a man at twenty-one will start out with absolute confidence that he is destined to be a leader of men and at forty will regard himself as a reasonable success if he can keep from being a goat.—Ohio State Journal.

Small Successes Count.
He satisfied with success in even the smallest matter and think that even such a result is no trifle.—Marcus Aurelius.

Wet Weather

A Detective Story

By COURTNEY RYLEY COOPER

Copyright by Frank A. Munsey Co.

Where the darkness was most dense waited Murphy of the Harrison street station, his hands deep in his pockets, his head shot forward.

He had been waiting a long time, starting now and then at the sound of a step on the quiet old street, slinking farther back into the shadows at the rumbling approach of the straggling cars, waiting and scowling.

There was something about Murphy which indicated that he was obeying orders against his will and his better judgment. "Tips" come often to police headquarters.

But, just the same, Murphy waited. Suddenly his position changed. His hands came out of the pockets and swung aimlessly for a second at his sides before they gripped. He leaned forward and listened.

It came again—a whistle, low, yet sharp. Murphy's lips puckered, and, note for note, they answered the signal. A wait. It came again.

Murphy stepped forward, crossed the street, his head lowered, his hand grasping something in one of his pockets. He approached the hazy form before him.

"Hello," he said shortly.

The man turned, and Murphy noticed he was young, well dressed and apparently surprised at his voice.

"Hello," came the reply.

"Waiting for somebody?" Murphy's head still was craned forward the least bit.

He was searching the face which showed dimly before him in a vain attempt to recognize some feature of the "mug room." He walked a step closer.

"Waiting for somebody?" he questioned again. The man laughed.

"Yes, Why?"

"Thought so. You'll find him at headquarters—in the captain's office."

He put forth a hand. The young man drew back just a trifle.

"I—I don't quite understand," he answered.

"You'll understand after a while, then. Murphy's my name, from headquarters."

"A detective?"

"Yes."

"But what's that got to do with me? I'm not wanted for anything—unless waiting for a friend is something."

Murphy noticed there was a boyish something about the face when the man before him smiled. "Clark's my name. I've just been to a party over on Kalamath and was coming home. There were two of us, you know—two couples—and we just decided that when we had taken the girls home we'd meet here and go over to my house for the night. The folks are all away. But—he laughed the least bit—"I spent a good deal of time saying good night, and I guess he went on to his own home. I—"

The scowl which Murphy had worn deepened a bit.

"You don't look like a crook," he said at last. "Where do you live?"

"1261 Elizabeth."

"Who's there that can identify you?"

There was a bit of an embarrassed laugh.

"Nobody right now. The folks are all away. I'm the only one home, you know. That's why I was going to have Bob stay all night with me. I—"

"Have you got the key to the house?"

A listlessness had come into Murphy's voice.

"The key? Why, of course?"

"That's enough. Let's see you work it."

Ten minutes later they stood before the veranda of a wide fronted house five blocks away. Murphy bent as he started to ascend the steps to the veranda and felt the stone of the lower step. He looked up.

"What did you say your name was?" he asked again.

"Bert Clark," came the answer.

Murphy struck a match and peered at the carved name of the lower step.

"That's right," he admitted.

The man had stepped to the door, inserted the key and turned the lock. Murphy grinned.

"Just a mistake, that's all. I'm sorry. A fellow will make mistakes that way, you know. I was looking for a couple of icebox robbers that have been swiping stuff off these apartment porches. Sorry. Hope you don't mind?"

The man on the porch laughed as he swung open the door and prepared to step inside.

"Oh, that's all right," he called cheerily. "Good night!"

The Lynx stood in the hall for just a moment after he had closed the door, listening for the fading steps of the plain clothes man without, and, hearing them, smiled to himself. Slowly he felt the curtains and pulled them. Then he switched on the lights.

"Jane was right," he said to himself as he looked around the hall before him. "It's all as she said. Now, if she hasn't got the wrong dope about them beating it I'm all right." He seemed to draw his coat about him tighter, and there came a little white into his face. "That gink may be waiting outside to see if I'll light the upstairs," he mused. "I've got to risk it."

Slowly he ascended the stairs and as silently as the animal whose name he bore. Softly he felt along the wall for the switch buttons, then hesitated. The Lynx was not in the habit of traveling under full candle power—in other houses than his own.

Perhaps after all Jane's information had been wrong. Perhaps—a moment more of hesitation, then the click of the switch. With animal swiftness the eyes of the Lynx traveled here, there, through each open door as the light of the hall displayed bedroom after bedroom, quiet and destitute of humanity. The Lynx smiled.

"And that harness bull in plain clothes took me word," he said sarcastically. "But in case he's waiting for me to go to bed?"

He walked noisily into the front room and snapped the switch. There was no need for quiet now. Jane had been right. The family was gone; all was easy, and there was the little wall safe before him.

He pulled the shades one by one and, standing in front of them, took off his coat and his collar. He pulled a chair close to the window and sat in it for a moment that his shadow might show on the shade. He listened.

He heard the steps of some one start from in front of the house and echo more and more faintly up the street. Again the Lynx smiled to himself. He lit a cigarette. He had been right, then, after all. Murphy of the plain clothes squad was assured.

And it was then, as the steps faded, that the Lynx became active. A dart to the opposite wall, a click, and the room was in darkness. He raised the shade that the light of a neighboring street lamp might cast its soft glare on the wall safe before him. Then he began his work.

Quietly, quickly he turned the little knob and listened for the click of the tumblers within. Again, again, again, and he noted the numbers as the tumblers fell. Once more—slowly and smilingly he worked the combination, and what he sought lay before him.

Not so much, it is true, but the Lynx was not a seeker of vast wealth. Solitaires are easier to dispose of than necklaces. After all, five hundred a night is not so bad, especially when one has a policeman to aid one.

The Lynx whistled a bit under his breath and tucked the proceeds of his work safely in his hatband. There were some papers. The Lynx passed them by. He knew there would be no money. Slowly he closed the safe and passed to the next room.

For the Lynx needed a revolver. He found it, where he had believed he would find it, under a pillow and passed on. Quite aimlessly he wandered through the house, rifling a drawer now and then by the light of his little searchlight merely for the curiosity of it. He sought the downstairs and looked at the silverware.

It was heavy and solid. Knives and forks he tucked into the aperture in the lining of his clothing, feeling cautiously now and then to be sure that nowhere did there appear a betraying bulge, shaking himself a bit to be certain that silver did not touch silver with its clink, which would cause trouble on the way home.

Ten minutes more of work, and again the Lynx laughed.

"And a fly cop takes me to the house just for the company of it," he smirked. "Jane did a good job, she did. Jane's a good girl. Maybe some of these days if I keep on getting dippy over her we'll hook up—maybe."

He felt himself again. He pocketed the little searchlight and fumbled his way to the door. He opened it and stepped out on the porch—and recoiled at the touch of a human hand.

"All right, kid," came the voice of the man outside; "I thought you'd hang yourself if I gave you enough rope. You see, kid, we wasn't sure that Jane woman would stick to her giveaway, so I just thought I'd be sure of the rope."

"Jane?" The Lynx trembled a bit.

"Yeh," said Murphy of the Harrison street station; "she kicked in tonight. Got conscience or something and coughed it all up about making the impression of the key and all that stuff. Hated to do it at that, but she ain't built for that sort of work, honest. That's a good kid, that Jane. I kinda like her. Raining a bit harder, ain't it?"

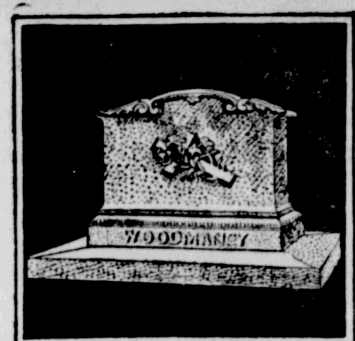

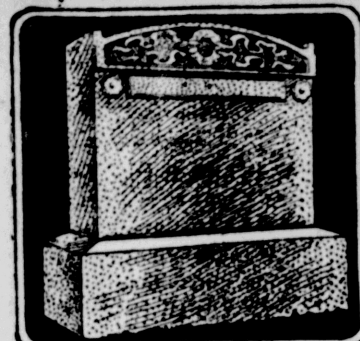

But the Lynx did not answer.

United States Laws.

An act when passed by both houses of congress and signed by the president becomes a law. If at any time thereafter questions of its constitutionality arise the matter is settled by the Supreme court. The court has more than once declared acts of congress unconstitutional, as, for instance, the "civil rights" bill.

Depraved Germs.

Federal health experts have decided that the feather bed is insanitary. A germ which wouldn't go to sleep and be perfectly harmless in a feather bed incarnates total depravity.

SPLENDID MONEY-SAVINGS AT THIS DISPOSAL OF MONUMENTS

Price Reductions That Are Genuine and Sweeping in Character

At no previous time during the history of this firm has it been found necessary to announce price-reductions on its products, but a series of circumstances incidental to a business like ours make the disposal of all surplus Monuments, etc., imperative at this particular time. If beauty of design, excellence of workmanship, perfection in the minutest detail and sharp price-reductions count for anything, there should be a whirlwind of Monument buying here while the price bars are down and the big money-saving chances are yours to embrace.

It was with the utmost reluctance that we launched this price-cutting event, but, as stated, conditions compelled us to act. Over-production, lack of room in our marble yard and the adjustment of the estate of a deceased member of the firm of Byrne Brothers pointed out to us the necessity of acting promptly with heroic attacks upon all former prices. Every Monument on hand is involved in our determination to reduce our over-production quickly and decisively.

This is not a "sale." It is a legitimate business proposition that should appeal irresistibly to every man or woman who has been thinking of remembering a departed relative with a monument this Spring. A similar money-saving opportunity may not again be presented in a lifetime. But you must act promptly, for we reserve the right to discontinue the specially lowered prices as soon as a sufficient number of Monuments have been disposed of to afford the relief sought. To those who are trustworthy and mean business we offer liberal terms and attractive prices, and stand ready to volunteer profitable advice born of ripe, practical experience.

HIGHLAND.

Highland, April 21.—The Methodist people were the musical attraction last Sunday evening when the church's seating capacity was well tested by a very fine audience to listen to the sacred cantata, "Cross and Crown," given by members of the choir and others in chorus. These people feel proud of what they have accomplished in the past. They have given some fine cantatas and the record of the choir in past years has been extremely remarkable. We think the conditions are very propitious for undertaking to establish a well trained choir, which in the future would be able to give fine choral work. There seems to be quite a widespread interest to develop the musical talent of all members and stimulate musical culture in the M. E. Church. Mrs. Kelsey Staples carries away the laurels as organist. She is considered the best pipe organ player here. She is also a fine piano player. It is worth a great deal to have one so competent to accompany singers. Those who took the solo parts did fine, and H. E. Wloox is to be congratulated on his success as training the chorus people. Take it all through it was well rendered, and the audience certainly could do nothing but appreciate it. There is a great amount of talent, both vocal and instrumental among the Methodist people. They can boast of two fine orchestras, and they can give a musical festival that would be worth listening to, and a first-class concert that would draw a good crowd of musical people. For most people these days can readily discover good talent, and certainly know harmony from discord.

Frank Bock of Poughkeepsie was in town on business last Saturday. Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Plass and Uriah Decker and family motored to Newburgh last Thursday evening and attended the theatre there. They were delighted with the play, and also enjoyed the motor trip. They returned before the midnight hour, and felt none the worse for the late hours.

Mrs. J. C. Dedrick of New York City arrived in town last Friday and spent several days among her friends. She will occupy her summer residence here before long.

Mrs. Abraham Brinckhoff and daughter, Belle, spent last Friday in Poughkeepsie.

Mr. and Mrs. F. L. Metcalf have had a guest from Little Falls the past week.

Mrs. Jesse Rose was called out of town last week on account of the death of an uncle.

Jennie Hasbrouck entertained Mrs. Lambert last week. She resides in New York City, and has a fine country residence here on the banks of the Hudson. It is said she will be here some time this summer.

We are informed Mr. and Mrs. Charles LeFevre will soon leave Florida, where they spent part of the winter, for their home here.

Dr. LaMore has purchased a Ford car. Now the doctor expects to enjoy himself. He has put in a great many years riding through the country with horse and wagon, as his practice demanded it. Now he has retired as M. D. and Doc. thinks now it is time he and his wife take pleasure, and we do not blame him. We also hope Doc. will not forget his friends who are not as fortunate as he to possess a automobile and drive around and give them a ride once in a while.

Mr. and Mrs. Lew Martin entertained out of town friends the past week.

Mrs. Wells had guests several days the past week.

Mrs. C. H. Ganse was a guest in Newburgh one day last week.

week one evening and the men say it was very enjoyable. Had plenty of good things to eat and a jolly good time.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Nash of White street have had as their guest Miss Cora Turrentine of Brooklyn. She resided here for a year, her father, Rev. F. Turrentine, was the pastor of the M. E. Church here, and the family were very highly esteemed and had many friends. Everyone was delighted to see Cora. She has a fine position in Brooklyn Hospital, and is a very successful trained nurse.

Mrs. George Goudy has been ill. Glad to say is better at present.

Lorin and Martin Schantz have been enjoying the beauties of Washington, D. C. for a short time. They returned reporting a grand trip, and they feel now ready for spring work. These trips do one a vast amount of good.

Mrs. George Kenney nee, Miss Anna Traphagen, died at her home in Jersey City last Sunday evening. She had been ill for a long time. She was born and brought up at Gardiner, lived there a long time and at one time resided in Ellenville with Mr. and Mrs. A. Constable who at that time had a large hotel where the famous Wayside Inn now stands. From there she came to Highland and while here became acquainted with her husband, Mr. Kenney. They have made their home in Jersey City for four years. She was a relative of the Traphagens of this place. Her funeral was held Tuesday evening from the late home and on Wednesday her remains were brought on and the interment was at Gardiner. She leaves to mourn her loss, a husband, a mother, a sister and brother who have the sympathy of a large circle of friends. She was a member of the Order of Eastern Star at this place.

Order of Eastern Star met Monday evening, they expect to receive their D. D. M. and A. G. L. of the Eleventh District on Monday evening, May 3. They are hoping to have a fine time and were informed they expect quite a large attendance.

Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Terpening of Washington avenue were surprised last Saturday evening by several friends going to their home and presenting them with many useful kitchen articles. These showens are very good and beside giving the people something they are in need of, they all enjoy a pleasant evening. They indulged in many pastimes and refreshments were served and at the midnight hour when all departed, they expressed pleasure and declared Mr. and Mrs. Terpening were very hospitable host and hostess.

Conrad Ley will soon leave for California. He will be absent some time.

J. R. Seaman has spent several days in Long Island looking after business interests.

Percy Young of Trenton, N. J., has been visiting relatives in this place the past week.

We hear Mrs. Farnum has gone to Canastota. Her parents are both ill.

Presbyterian Ladies' Aid gave a reception on Wednesday afternoon in the church. They had a very pleasant time.

Mrs. Daniel Kurtz has been ill at her home for a few days this week. Reporter was informed she is gaining nicely and expects to be out soon.

Lew Thorn has disposed of his property. Suppose he will go traveling now, perhaps to California. Lew loves to see some of the beautiful places and we do not blame him.

SEARCHES FOR WIFE, PARTED BY MYSTERIOUS WOMAN.

New York, April 21.—For five years the machinations of a mysterious woman have kept K. J. Worm, former attaché of the Danish consular service, from his wife, a Swedish noblewoman. Hearing that she is in this country, Worm has come to New York and is living at No. 147 West 14th street. In Philadelphia in 1906, Worm married Miss Christine Von Kohler of Upsala, Sweden. Five years ago they returned to Europe, Mrs. Worm remaining in Sweden while her husband went on business to Denmark.

"I received a number of letters from some unknown woman impugning my wife's character when I was on that trip," said Worm. "Wrote to my wife and received no reply. The same person who wrote to me of her, sent letters to her telling untruthful things about me. I resigned my position to search for her."

Satisfaction—for a sturdy man—can come from real tobacco only. Insuperior mixtures don't appeal to a man with real tobacco hunger.

LIBERTY is pure Kentucky leaf, with the "body" for a real smoke or chew, rich and pleasing. It takes three to five years to age the tobacco in LIBERTY; the process can't be hurried. That's the reason LIBERTY is so ripe, mellow and healthful.

LIBERTY will "make good" the first time you smoke or chew it. But if you want to prove that LIBERTY satisfaction isn't a "flash in a pan," give LIBERTY a week's trial. You'll know then it always satisfies and you'll always use it.

REFORM the Substituter

by Refusing to Buy "Just as Good"

THE substitution evil extends to all lines of business, but it is a recognized fact that the dealer who is guilty of fostering the sale of "Just as Goods" is doomed.

THE buying public is getting wiser each day, and as it grows in wisdom the dealer who offers "Just as Goods" will surely reap the whirlwind.

YOU can reform the dealer who tries to make you take an inferior article instead of the article you ask for.

REFUSE to buy the article he says is "just as good."

IF every person who is offered a "Just as Good" would immediately walk out of the store in which the substitution habit shows itself, substitution would soon end.

IT makes no difference what the dealer says. When you want soap, perfume, household medicine, paint, varnish, automobile tires, food products, chewing gum, corsets, underwear, shirts, collars, shoes, hair tonic, tooth paste or powders, grape juice or soda fountain drinks, etc., whatever you want, ASK FOR IT BY NAME of manufacturer or trade mark brand, and insist on getting it.

Don't accept substitutes. You can quickly kill substitution.

ROOSEVELT ON WITNESS STAND

By Telegram to The Freeman. Syracuse, April 21.—The lid was nailed down today on the Barnes-Roosevelt $50,000 libel suit.

When court opened at 10:25 o'clock Justice Andrews announced his ruling that Colonel Roosevelt could testify to nothing not contained in his formal answer to the Barnes' complaint unless he could prove his testimony by corroborative witnesses.

"I will say," said Justice Andrews, "that while this witness (Roosevelt) may show that his published utterance was uttered without malice he may not put in the record anything outside his filed answer, unless he can produce witnesses in corroboration."

The ruling is against us," said John M. Bowers in a whisper, while aloud he said:

"We note an exception."

Justice Andrews: "Exception allowed."

"Mr. Roosevelt," said Clerk C. J. Clarke, and the colonel resumed the stand for further direct examination.

The colonel was more like his old self than at any time since his return from the River of Doubt and the man-eating fish in South America.

The firm teeth glistened in the old T. R. smile. The only preparation he made to undergo the expected quiz was to exchange a pair of thick lensed eye glasses for the gold spectacles he wore into court.

Mr. Barnes was early in court, wearing a confident air and a checked waistcoat.

Mr. Bowers fired the opening gun by asking Colonel Roosevelt when he had any conversation with Mr. Barnes.

Mr. Ivins objected, was overruled and took an exception.

"I was called on by Mr. Barnes at Oyster Bay," said the colonel "in 1898 between the time I was elected Governor of New York and the time I assumed the office."

"Mr. Barnes gave me the impression that he believed in the righteousness of his rule."

Vigorous objection from Mr. Ivins. The defense then reintroduced a letter offered yesterday from Barnes to Roosevelt.

More objections, overruled.

"I told Mr. Barnes," continued Roosevelt with a broad grin, "that Mr. Platt told me when I was elected, that he controlled the legislature and that anything I wanted that the bosses did not want, would be defeated."

"Mr. Platt said the organization had to control."

"Did Mr. Platt say 'Bosses'?" interrupted Mr. Ivins.

"I am not certain," said Mr. Roosevelt, "but he referred to the machine leaders."

"I told Mr. Barnes that I had been sent for by Platt in 1898 who asked me to call on him at the Fifth Avenue Hotel."

"The amen corner?" asked Mr. Ivins.

"Yes," snapped the colonel.

He said he saw Platt and Platt told him that the organization must rule.

Against the vigorous and repeated protests of Mr. Ivins, Mr. Roosevelt then told of Mr. Barnes's call on him when he told Barnes of his talk with Platt.

"Mr. Barnes told me," resumed Mr. Roosevelt, "that the organization must rule. He said it was necessary to have bosses. The people, he said, were not fit to govern. They were better off with bosses."

"Was any one else present when you met Senator Platt or Mr. Barnes?" asked Mr. Bowers.

"No."

"Did any one know of the meetings?"

"One man knew of my meeting with Platt. I got a telegram from him."

"Will you name him?" interposed Mr. Ivins.

"I object," said Mr. Bowers, "to the plaintiff's counsel interrupting the witness."

"Do not make objections or ask questions when they interrupt the continuity of the witness," said Justice Andrews.

"I cannot break his continuity, Your Honor," retorted Mr. Ivins, and even Roosevelt and Barnes joined in the laugh that was quelled by the court's gavel vigorously by Justice Andrews.

Roosevelt then was allowed to detail several conversations with Barnes. One of them dealt with former Governor Charles E. Hughes.

"I told him (Barnes) that Hughes was a boss," said Mr. Roosevelt.

"My sympathies and friendship at that time were all with Mr. Barnes and against Mr. Hughes."

The witness then told of other conversations with Barnes from 1898 to 1907, in all of which, he said, Mr. Barnes upheld bossism and considered he could handle the legislature.

Many objections were made and overruled. It appeared to the unbiased spectators that while the court formally put a lid on the defense, the lid was full of blow holes.

Today when it was known the expression would be the first witness, the court was besieged with an army of spectators. Only those who could find seats—300—one-third women, were admitted.

By orders of Justice Andrews all doors were locked and elevators would not stop on third floor, where the trial is going on in part one, Onondaga county supreme court.

The defense then was allowed to read a letter from Barnes to Roosevelt in 1910, during the Hughes' administration when the Hart-Agnew anti-racing bill was pending.

This was the letter referred to yesterday mentioning August Belmont in which Barnes told Roosevelt that he had changed his mind and was in favor of the bill to abolish horse racing despite his friendship for Mr. Belmont.

In this letter Mr. Barnes reiterated his belief that the organization must rule and referred to himself as not being "a machine made politician or a patronage broker."

Justice Andrews ruled against the defense when he sustained Mr. Ivins' motion to strike out Mr. Roosevelt's statement that "the letter bore on the Hart-Agnew bill."

That was an inference, Mr. Barnes in the letter did not mention the bill, but referred to "The matter in question."

Stray Child Restored.

There was considerable excitement in Higginsville this morning when it was found that little Bernard Hamilton had strayed away from home. The lad was found on the uptown streets by Policeman Kuohn and when questioned said that his father's name was "Papa" Hamilton and his mother's name "Mama" Hamilton. Where he lived or where his father was employed the little tot did not know but after some clever work by the policeman it was learned that the tot was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Hamilton, of No. 4 Hurley avenue, and Policeman Kuohn soon restored the lad to his anxious mother, who was vainly hunting the neighborhood for him.

Diplomatic Johnny.

John was playing in the back yard with a crowd of other little fellows. Suddenly someone said, "Let's have a party." Accordingly, each one went to his mother for something to contribute. John's mother was making cookies and gave him one for each of the others. When he came down and saw that the other little boys brought bread and butter, he exclaimed, "O, everybody eat what they brought!"

PRINCIPAL FIGURES IN BISMARCK MEMORIAL. RUSSIAN SISTER OF MERCY GETS ST. GEORGE MEDAL.

The picture on the left shows two of the principal figures in the recent memorial services to Bismarck in Berlin, when a statue was unveiled in honor of the great chancellor. The picture shows the present imperial chancellor of the German government, Bethman von Hollweg. He is walking beside Otto von Bismarck.

To the right is shown the only Sister of Mercy who has received the Russian gold medal with ribbon of St. George. She was decorated for bravery in attending to wounded soldiers under fire. The brave nurse worked in the firing trenches and her prompt first aid work saved the lives of several soldiers who were dangerously wounded. She was decorated an empress order of the Czar.

"The most artistic performance of 'Il Trovatore' ever taken on tour," is the verdict of Press and Public.

The Boston English Opera Company is as different from the average opera company as a New York production is from a repertoire company.

They do only the one opera "IL TROVATORE," and every energy has been directed to make that one opera a real production.

The cast headed by Joseph F. Sheehan, one of the world's greatest "Manricos," has been especially selected for this one opera. The production also was built for "IL TROVATORE" only and is complete in every detail.

The prices are exceedingly reasonable for such an organization and criticisms from other cities unite in proclaiming it the most artistic and complete production of "IL TROVATORE" ever taken on tour.

Swallowed and Climbed.
A woman newly rich was invited to an aristocratic dinner party. During the course of fowl and salad this woman noticed with dismay a fat, furry caterpillar on her topmost leaf of lettuce. Glancing up, she met her aristocratic hostess' eye. The hostess, too, had seen the caterpillar. Her gaze implored the guest to save the dinner from catastrophe. The guest gave her hostess a reassuring smile. Then she doubled a lettuce leaf around the caterpillar and swallowed it calmly. The look of awe and gratitude that her hostess gave her was an assurance that her footing in society was at last firmly established.

"Did you think," said Mrs. Newly-rich to her daughter afterward, "that I'd lose a chance of establishing the family socially for a little thing like a caterpillar?"

Where Shell Bracelets Come From.
Though Dacca has lost its trade in fine muslins, it is still the chief center of the manufacture of the shell bracelets everywhere worn among the Hindus. These are cut by women, using a very primitive saw, from what is popularly known as the chank shell of the East Indian seas, and into the sunk portion of the design colored lac is melted. Except the rare specimens with reversed opening, which have fetched as much as $70, chanks are not costly. But the shell is sacred to Vishnu, and the bangles and anklets made from it are frequently left on the body at burial. Thus these anklets are not entirely subject to fluctuations of taste, and the demand for them remains steady.—London Chronicle.

LEIBHARDT.

Leibhardt, April 21.—Sunday school will be held at 2 o'clock and preaching services at 3 o'clock on Sunday afternoon. We hope to see a good attendance.

Trout are very scarce and few are caught yet on account of the cold weather and snow water in streams.

Miss Hilda Myers is drilling her pupils for the Arbor Day exercises, which will be observed on May 7.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Quick of Ton-gore were guests at the home of Mr.
Quick's mother, Mrs. Freda Quick, on Sunday.

We are glad to hear that Krumville will have a Fourth of July celebration this year, as the Leibhardt people never failed to attend their celebration.

Mrs. Agnes Brown entertained her children and grandchildren to a fine turkey supper Monday evening at her home, the Hill Side Farm House.

Mrs. D. J. Brown and Mrs. Agnes Brown called on Mrs. Peter Hornbeck and Mrs. Juda Quick Friday afternoon.

Mrs. L. E. Lawrence pleasantly entertained Mrs. Arthur Davis of Whitfield and the Misses Josie Embree and Esther Lyons of Krumville Saturday afternoon. Miss Lyons and Miss Embree also attended the church social and were over Sunday guests of Mrs.
L. E. Lawrence.

We were pleased to see so many from Palentown and Tabasco attend our entertainment and social last Saturday evening.

Mrs. Amelia Markle spent Friday with Mrs. Elsie Merrihew of Krumville.

Miss Hilda Hornbeck was in Ker-honkson on Saturday.

Alexander Brown and Harry F.
Brown were in Kingston on Saturday.

Stephen Gorsline has his new barn nearly completed. Mr. Dumond from Palentown is the carpenter.

Mrs. Arthur Davis, who spent last week with relatives and friends, has returned to her home at Whitfield.

Albert Quick of Kerhonkson is spending a few days with his grandmother, Mrs. Juda Quick.

Mrs. William J. Brown and son,
Master Fred, spent Sunday with her brother, William Oakley, and family, at Acorn Hill.

Peter Barnhardt has recently sold one of his team horses.

Out of town people who came to attend the entertainment and church social last Saturday evening were Roy Quick, Ralph Hornbeck, Asa Hornbeck and Neil Hornbeck from Lake Mohonk; Miss Hazel Baker of High Falls, DeWitt Hornbeck of Whitfield, Miss Beatrice Baker and Edison Baker of Mottacahonts, and the Misses Josie Embree and Miss Lyons of Krumville.

Lorenzo Barley and his children have moved back in the Sailor Mill House.

Miss Dora Quick visited her cousin, Miss Nina Quick, Monday.

Miss Hilda Myers was a guest of her friend, Miss Louella Brown, last Thursday night.

The entertainment and social that was given in the M. E. Church last Saturday evening was a success in every way. The church was well filled, quite a number attending from out of town. We wish to thank those who helped in any way to make it a success. Proceeds clear of expenses

CLYDE MILAN MAY ENTER BASE STEALING RACE.

Washington, April 21.—Clyde Milan, the speedy sack stealer of the Senators, may enter a season competition against Fritz Maisel, of the Yankees, to see who can steal the greatest number of bases this year.
Fritz challenged Ty Cobb, but the Detroit player refused to accept the challenge. Milan stole 88 sacks in one season. He is going at top speed this year after having a bad season in 1914.

The Habeas Corpus.

The substance of habeas corpus was given in the famous Magna Charta of 1215, but as today understood the habeas corpus refers to the act of 1870.
This act provides that any man taken to prison can insist on being brought by his accuser before a judge, who shall immediately decide whether or not bail is to be given; that the accused shall have the question of his guilt decided by a jury of twelve men and not by a government agent; that no one can be tried twice on the same charge; that every one may insist on being examined within twenty days of his arrest and tried by jury the next session; that no defendant may be sent out of the county for imprisonment.—New York American.

Verate and Miles.

Many people know that to multiply any number of French kilometers by five and divide the product by eight is to get an exceedingly close approximation to the number of miles in the same distance, but it is even easier mentally to convert versts to miles, as one of the former is equal to 0.633 of the latter, or almost exactly two-thirds.

Trees and Chimneys.

The existence of tall plants and trees depends largely on the wind force. A tree with square trunk and branches would offer so much resistance to the wind that it would be continually having its branches snapped. Engineers build tall chimneys and piers for bridges round in preference to any other form.

The Philathea Club of the Albany Avenue Baptist Church recently held its monthly meeting at the home of Miss Edna Banker on Albany avenue, and in addition to the society business meeting, gave the hostess a surprise in the form of a linen shower in honor of her approaching marriage to Kenneth Bassett. Miss Banker was the recipient of many handsome pieces of linen and also of the heartiest congratulations of her many friends. During the evening refreshments were served.

Wilson-Schnert.

The Rev. Dr. Frank L. Wilson, formerly pastor of St. James' M. E. Church, now pastor of Tremont Methodist Church in New York, and Deaconess Kathryn Marie Schnert of the Hedding House in New York, were married on Tuesday in New York. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Dr. Jamieson of Park Avenue Church, assisted by the Rev. H. E. Schnert of Cleveland, Ohio, a brother of the bride. Dr. Wilson was for six years district superintendent of the Kingston district of the New York M. E. Conference. His first wife, Dr. Isabella M. Wilson, died in 1909.

Practical Talk on Gardening.

The Ulster Garden Club held its regular meeting on Tuesday at the home of Mrs. G. D. B. Hasbrouck. Following the business session, Mr. Fuld of the Knight-Struck Seed Company, talked to the ladies on "Perennials," and gave a very practical and valuable talk. He said he had often wondered at the number of amateur gardeners and about the reason for their never graduating into anything higher than the amateur class. When given the task of going through a number of seed catalogues to prepare a working, actually possible list of seeds for private use, and no one was expected from his or her garden to feed the army, he found some of the reasons for the slow development of the average gardener, in the very misleading character of the average seed catalogue. He illustrated pointedly, just in the instance of asparagus, seldom if ever raised from seeds, and showing that where four varieties were advertised, that which would be green, or white, etc., all a matter of bleaching or non-bleaching, all would come from the same plants. Beginning with the starting of perennials, Mr. Fuld told plainly and simply how to make hot beds and cold frames for the starting of seeds. He further explained that few perennials today are raised from seeds, for in many instances the seeds of these plants lose their germinating power when a few months old. Then he told of the customary fault of too sparing use of the knife in dividing growing plants. It was usually best each year to lift and divide the plants thus giving stronger and more new growth. Times to start plants, when to transplant, etc., were given, also the names of many valuable perennials. Mr. Fuld adhered very closely to his subject, answering pertinent questions, as well as speaking on the subject.

The Military Ball.

The armory presented a striking military appearance bedecked with flags and bunting, which overhung the heads of the merry gathering of friends of the soldier boys at the annual military ball and review of Company M by Lieutenant Robert E. Carpenter, reservist, Tuesday evening. The election of a first lieutenant preceded the military exercises which were given by the different elements of the company. Second Lieutenant Richard H. Kuehn receiving all the votes cast, which were 88, every member present for the review casting a complimentary vote for the popular second lieutenant. The result will be forwarded to headquarters and then Lieut. Kuehn will be ordered to Albany for the examination. Sergeant Rudolph C. Dittus will in all probability be elected second lieutenant, just as soon as Lieut. Kuehn is advanced. Following the election, Corporal Cashin's squad gave an exhibition of squad drilling. Corporal Bence and his squad pitched the large pyramid tent, which was done in record time. Shelter tents were pitched by Corporal Gerhard's squad. After striking tents, Lieut. Kuehn formed the company for the setting up exercises, the men being applauded several times while going through these physical stunts.

Captain Meagher then took the entire company and worked out a problem in attack, the company being divided into three platoons in charge of Lieut. Kuehn, Sergeant Mulken and Sergeant Dittus. Following the problem the company was formed for review, the members of the local command presenting a fine military appearance when they were formed into line to await the appearance of the reviewing officer, Lieut. Carpenter, reservist, who was accompanied by Captain Snyder, captain of the Tenth Infantry and Captain Cassidy and Lieutenant Doty of Catskill. The presentation of the medals for shooting was made by Major George Chandler, who delivered a short and interesting address on the services a national guardsman is rendering to his country. Dancing was then the vogue until 1 o'clock, music being furnished by Martin's orchestra of nine pieces. The next social function at the armory will be on May 11, when McEnelly's Singing Orchestra comes here for the third and last time this season. The armory should be crowded when the McEnelly's appear, for without doubt they are the best concert and dance orchestra in the country.

Elaborate Banquet.

On Tuesday evening the Lowell Club celebrated its sixteenth birthday and enjoyed an elaborate banquet at Hotel Stuyvesant, the many courses of the banquet seemed each to excel its predecessor in deliciousness, and all were served in faultless manner. The table decorations consisted of four large and very artistic baskets of delicate hued tulips, the gift of Mrs. W. R. Harrison, the retiring president, who was unable to be present. The dainty place cards were held to the glasses by tiny green parrots, and cunning little white monkeys were their companions as favors, both emblematic of the land of South America, which has been the study subject of the club the past year. At the close of the banquet each guest received as a souvenir of the happy occasion, a pound of "Rio" coffee, also the gift of Mrs. Harrison. In the sincerely regretted absence of Mrs. Harrison, Miss Baker, the newly elected president, presided, and proved to be a most gracious and delightful mistress. Throughout the banquet Mrs. T. D. Lewis enlivened the feast with "A Little Nonsense Now and Then," in the form of pertinent and clever questions asked of the various guests, both the questions and answers occasioning much merriment, and just before the serving of the repast, Mrs. Lewis responded to the toast, "The Lowell Club," in an able manner. Mrs. Fessenden was the first "after dinner speaker," her toast subject being "Reveries of the Lowell Club," in which a brief review of the club's history for the past sixteen years, with reminiscent touches was admirably given. Mrs. Fessenden is one of the eleven charter members of the club. Mrs. Brigham spoke to the toast, "The World is so Full of a Number of Things," and included among that number our own small but highly prized share of peace. Completing the quotation of her toast subject, "We should all be as happy as kings," Mrs. Brigham expressed the thought that we should be infinitely happier than kings, since in so many instances to duty their lot was anything but happy. Mrs. Moulton gave as her toast response, a monologue by Mirandy, "Many a True Word Spoken in Jest," and exceedingly clever and pointed it was. Mrs. Baragwanath, the new member of the club, whose son and his bride are now living in South America, spoke of the "Social Life of South America." A letter from Mrs. Baragwanath's son told interestingly of the unusual experience of going to bed on one side of the equator and eating breakfast the next morning on the other side of the same imaginary line, and described vividly the social life of the country, in relation to that better class of the people, so seldom studied or known about. Mrs. Rose Witner was asked for a toast to "Manana," (meaning "tomorrow"), and gave an excellent prophetic sketch of this newly developing land, where still it is the prevailing custom to "put off until tomorrow what should be done today." Mrs. Eugene Deyo had the last toast of the evening, bidding the past year to the future when the club will take up the study of "Ireland." Mrs. Deyo was sure it was not a long way to Tipperary, especially as it would be traversed another year by the Lowellites the coming year, and bespoke the hearty and customary interest and co-operation of all. Those present were Mrs. MacMillan, honorary member; Miss Baker, Mrs. Louis Basten, Miss Mary Basten, Mrs. Harry Brigham, Mrs. Baragwanath, Mrs. James V. Bruyn, Mrs. Samuel Dimmick, Mrs. Eugene Deyo, Mrs. Oscar Edwards, Mrs. James Everett, Mrs. W. N. Fessenden, Miss Martha Fuller, Mrs. Wesley Hale, Mrs. T. D. Lewis, Mrs. W. N. Martin, Mrs. C. K. Moulton, Mrs. Myron Teller, Mrs. Augustus Van Buren, Mrs. Van Leuven and Mrs. Rose Witner.

Source of Robinson Crusoe.

The Edinburgh Courier, long since dead, is worthy of remembrance, not only by Edinburgh and Scotland, but by the literary world at large. Its editors include Daniel Defoe, who seems to have been the first occupant of its editorial chair, to which he appears to have gone on his liberation from Newgate. "Old and New Edinburgh" mentions "the Edinburgh Courier of Oct. 16, 1707 (then edited by Daniel Defoe)" says it is suspected that he continued long to edit the Edinburgh Courier during his Edinburgh sojourn that Defoe heard all about Alexander Selkirk of Largo, the original of Robinson Crusoe.—London Chronicle.

Language of the Nose.

"Here is an article in the paper that says a woman's character can be determined by her nose."
"Well, there may be something in that, but there's a surer way. No one can make a mistake concerning a woman's character if he will look at the noses of other women who meet her. The extent to which they turn up at such times shows just what she is or isn't."—Exchange.

In the Same Boat.

Newlywed Husband—The time has come, dearest, when I shall have the painful task of acquainting your father with the fact that I am heavily in debt. Wife—Don't mind that. I'm sure he'll give you the sympathy of a companion in adversity.—London Telegraph.

Insulted Indeed.

"Why is Mrs. Van Wombat so angry with you?"
"It seems the cook she lured away from me is not satisfactory."—Kansas City Journal.

Her Scheme.

"Why does your fiancée study the bill of fare so long?"
"She wants to figure to me afterward how much I will save if we get married."—Meggendorfer Blaetter.

Cookery Points

Save on Your Sugar.

Now that the high price of sugar is bemoaned it behooves us to remember that there are other sweetening agents, molasses and honey, which can virtually take its place. When baking apples use a teaspoonful of strained honey to each apple instead of sugar, and in fruit pies and sauces also use this sweetening agent. When making gems and muffins a teaspoonful of honey in place of sugar will answer just as well. Cakes and desserts are the great sugar consumers of housekeeping. Some can be made without it and with results which are just as satisfactory.

Honey Blancmange.—Dissolve three tablespoonfuls of cornstarch in a little cold milk and add it to one pint of boiling milk. Boil until thoroughly cooked, then add one-half cupful of honey and a few drops of vanilla, stirring thoroughly. When cold serve with cream.

Honey Rice Cakes.—Make a thick custard by boiling a cupful of washed rice in slightly salted milk, cooking until the rice is dry and tender; then stir in one well beaten egg, a tablespoonful of honey and a few drops of vanilla; lastly two tablespoonfuls of cream. Beat until light and pour into shallow cups and set away until cold. Before serving turn out and hollow out a small piece on the top, fill with any kind of canned fruit or jelly which is open, put in the oven a few minutes and serve with cream.

Old Time Molasses Cookies.—One cupful of melted lard, one-half cupful of warm water, two cupfuls of molasses, one teaspoonful each of soda, ginger and cloves, a little salt and flour enough to roll thin.

Golden Orange Cake.—Mix one-half cupful of butter or clarified drippings, one cupful of New Orleans molasses, one beaten egg, juice, pulp and grated rind of a small orange, one teaspoonful of soda (dissolved in a scant half cupful of cold water), two cupfuls of pastry flour and a little salt and bake in a shallow pan in a hot oven. Rub the top with a little orange marmalade.

The Cooking of Fish.

It is well to remember in preparing fish that boiling is the most insipid and wasteful way of cooking fish. To be made at all palatable a rich sauce is needed for all kinds of boiled fish except salmon and bluefish, which are so oily in themselves that boiling does not hurt them. Never try to boil a fish whole, as the head of a boiled fish is about the most unsightly object that can be offered a hungry family. If you must boil, bear in mind that if fish be put in cold water the juices are drawn into the water, and if cooked in rapidly boiling water the fish breaks on the outside before the middle is done. If the fish breaks and looks unsightly remove the bones and flake it, piling it lightly on a platter and pour the sauce over it. If it comes out unbroken serve on a folded napkin, with the sauce in a sauce boat. Allow about six minutes to a pound in boiling.

All varieties of fish need accompaniments of starchy foods, like bread and potatoes, and white fish need also fat or butter to make them desirable as food. Because of the tannin in tea it is better not to serve tea at the same meal with fish. The juices of fish—shellfish particularly—are of so alkaline a nature that lemon juice or vinegar afford the neutralizing agency in the form of a desirable condiment.

Fish bake through more evenly, brown better and are more easily served if placed upright in the pan instead of on one side. Fish that are short and broad, like shad, may be propped in place with stale bread or pared potatoes.

Sponge Gingerbread.

Pour one cupful of best molasses in mixing bowl or dish and stir into it (molasses) one teaspoonful of baking soda (saleratus), dissolved in a little hot water, and follow with one-half cupful of sour milk or buttermilk (use the one most convenient). Add one generous tablespoonful of melted butter and one teaspoonful of ground ginger. After stirring all well together add flour to conveniently handle on board and roll out. Cut in squares about one-half inch thick and bake in a reasonably quick oven.

Baked Barley.

Soak six tablespoonfuls of barley in cold water overnight. In the morning put the barley in an earthen dish and pour three and a half pints of boiling water over it. Add salt as desired, bake in a moderately quick oven about two and a half hours or till perfectly absorbed. When half done add four or five tablespoonfuls of sugar mixed with grated lemon peel. It may be eaten warm, but is pleasant served cold, molded in cups and served with cream or nut cream.

Apple Fritters.

Slice thin two medium sized sour apples. Make a batter of one and one-half cupfuls of flour, two teaspoonfuls of baking powder, one-quarter teaspoonful salt, one egg and three-quarters cupful of milk. Mix and sift dry ingredients. Add the milk gradually and egg well beaten. Stir in the sliced apples and drop by spoonfuls in hot fat which will brown a cube of bread in sixty seconds. Drain on brown paper and sprinkle with powdered sugar.

Benefit of College Training.

First Tramp—"So Waggle is a college man? And what good does that do him?" Second Tramp—"All kinds o' good. He scares off lots of dogs by giving the college yell!"—Puck.

In Defense of the Mule.

In what is described by Justice Henry Lamm of the supreme court of Missouri as a "celebrated case" the court handed down a decision exonerating one Lyman sued one Dale for damages done to the plaintiff's buggy by "the aforesaid wild and unruly mule." After being considered by justices of the peace, one circuit judge, three judges of the court of appeals and four supreme court justices the mule is exonerated by Justice Lamm as follows:
"There are sporadic instances of mules behaving badly. That one that Absalom rode and went from under him at a crisis in his fate, for instance. The mule don't kick according to no rule," saith the American negro. His voice has been a matter of derision, and there are those who put their tongue in their cheek when speaking of it.
"However, the faithfulness, surefootedness and good sense of the mule, all matters of common knowledge, may be allowed to stand over against his faults and create a preponderance in the scale in his favor."—New York Sun.

Grief of a Rhinoceros.

A rhinoceros is capable of grief, according to a Paris writer who wrote this anecdote years ago: "The animal had been in the collection at the Jardin des Plantes for twenty-two years, but was of an unsocial and irascible temper, and not even his keepers ventured to take any liberties with him. One day, however, the little lap dog of the wife of the director got into his house by squeezing in between the bars. Instead of killing the intruder, as expected, the rhinoceros allowed the little creature to play with him, scampering over his back, biting his neck and playing off all manner of sportive tricks. The two became great friends, the 'wee doggie' passing several hours each day with his undermostest acquaintance, who put up patiently with all its teasing. One day the rhinoceros inadvertently set his foot on his little pet, killing it instantly. The poor brute's grief at the catastrophe was pitiable. For two days he did not eat a particle of food."

Verhaeren's Love of Finery.

A love of gorgeous raiment, such as characterized Emile Verhaeren, the noted Belgian author, in his youth, has been common to many famous writers. Disraeli as a young man startled the town by an evening dress comprising green velvet trousers, a canary colored waistcoat and a coat with lace cuffs. Dickens, likewise, was fond of a certain bright green waistcoat, which he wore in accompaniment with a vivid scarlet tie, and he turned up at Pith's studio one day in a sky blue overcoat with red cuffs. Even more fearful and wonderful was Dumas' appearance at an ambassador's reception in "a shirt on which were depicted a number of little red demons sporting themselves amid flames of yellow fire." "My costume was a great success," he wrote. "Every one thronged round and made much of me."—London Graphic.

Why He Was Shy.

"Thought you were to have that second installment ready yesterday on your car?" said the collector for the automobile concern.
"I did have it," was the reply, "but I was arrested for speeding, and the judge seemed to need the money more than you did."—Yonkers Statesman.

Hard Luck.

Harduppe—Why so despondent? Fludub—Oh, I can't seem to get out of debt! Harduppe—Gee, that's nothing! I can't even get in.—Life.

CATHERINE STINSON

GIRL, 19, PLANS TRANSCONTINENTAL FLIGHT.

San Antonio, Texas, April 21.—Miss Catherine Stinson, 19 years old, plans to attempt a transcontinental flight from New York this summer. She will start about June 1, and will use a 90 horse power biplane.

She is said to be the first woman who has flown at night, illuminating her aeroplane with incandescent lights. She does all her own repair work on the machine.
Miss Stinson will attempt the direct coast to coast route, from New York to Chicago, to Omaha, to Denver, to Salt Lake, to Reno, to Sacramento, to San Francisco.

EDITH DEACON

AMBASSADOR PAGE SAVES MISS DEACON, SUSPECTED OF BEING SPY IN ITALY.

Palermo, Italy, April 21.—Miss Edith Deacon of Boston and Newport, daughter of Mrs. Florence Baldwin and sister of Princess Antoinette Radziwill, formerly Dorothy Deacon, was recently suspected of being a spy when traveling at Gigenli. She appealed to Thomas Nelson Page, American Ambassador to Italy, who applied to the Italian minister of the interior, and convinced him of Miss Deacon's identity and neutrality.

A Strange Punishment.

Professor Petrie, the eminent Egyptologist, while exploring about thirty-five miles from Cairo, discovered a tomb of the twelfth dynasty that thieves had broken into thousands of years ago. A tragedy attended the robbery, as Professor Petrie also discovered. The Sunday School Times calls it "a tragedy of providential justice."
"It appears," says Professor Petrie, "that the plunderers removed only a few bricks, so that a man could crawl into the tomb. One of the men entered, opened the coffin, lifted the mummy out and laid it across the coffin, so that he could easily unwind the bandages. He first found a collar of beads, which he passed out into the shaft, where we found it. Then he came to the jewel (a beautiful work of gold and colored gems), and took it from the body. Before he could do anything more the roof apparently fell in and crushed him and the mummy. The other robbers, seeing the fate of their accomplice, abandoned the tomb and filled in the shaft to hide their guilt."
The explorers found the skeleton of the robber beside that of the mummy.

Homemade Barometer.

To make a cheap but effective barometer take eight grams of pulverized camphor, four grams of pulverized nitrate of potassium, two grams of pulverized nitrate of ammonia, and dissolve them all in sixty grams of alcohol. Pour the whole loton in a long and slender bottle, the top of which should be closed with a piece of pig's bladder—which your family butcher will give you gratis—containing a pin hole to admit air. When rain is about to visit you the solid particles of your liquid barometer will tend gradually to mount, little star crystals forming in the liquid, which otherwise would remain clear. Should high winds be approaching your barometer will become thick, as if fermenting. In addition to which a solid film of particles will form on the surface. Fair weather is indicated by the liquid remaining clear, with the solid particles settling into a firm sediment.—London Answers.

Beavers as Engineers.
In "The Romance of the Beaver" A. R. Dugmore, the author, tells how he watched a colony of beavers in Newfoundland building a dam across a swift stream about forty feet wide. "Before the work was quite finished, so that the dam had not yet settled enough to gain its proper strength, there came a great rain, which continued for several days and flooded the country. The beavers, seeing that their new dam was threatened with immediate destruction, came down during the night and made a large opening by cutting away the sticks. This allowed the water to escape, and so the dam was saved. No sooner had the water resumed its normal level than the little engineers closed the break they had made and continued the structure."

Paris—French made progress in Montmarre forest. German counter-attacks repulsed. Belgian aviators bombarded German arsenal at Bruges and aviation grounds at Idsewege.

Berlin—German aviators bombarded Bieloctok. Four French attacks repulsed. Russians evacuated Tarnow owing arrival of heavy Austrian artillery to bombard town.

Twenty thousand English and French troops landed near Enos, European Turkey.

Petrograd—Fighting renewed along Pilica-Nida front. Austro-German troops opened offensive in this region. Russians across Austrians of using explosive bullets. Russian torpedo boat destroyers again bombarded Turkish positions in Black Sea.

LOCAL POWDER MILLS ARE BUSY

It is rumored that the Nitro Powder Company has been awarded a large contract to furnish a large amount of ammunition for the French army in the European war. The plant is busy at present and the full quota of men are employed but no information is forthcoming from those in authority.

The Brewster powder works at Port Ewen is also busy on a big job and men are being taken on daily. Despite the fact that the men say some of the goods produced are consigned to European countries the officials refuse to divulge the ultimate destination of the goods.

Navigation Notes.

The tug Baker came down the river this morning with the Cornell tow. The Corbitts started from New York on Tuesday night for points up the river, having a big tow behind her.

It is expected that the steamer Jacob H. Tremper will be hauled off drydock at Hiltobrant's shipyard at South Rondout this week and will soon go into commission between Newburgh and Albany. Although no definite announcement has been made by the Central-Hudson Steamboat Company the new hull of the Tremper is about completed.

The Touch That Failed.

Pedestrians and passengers on trolley cars were treated to a fine sight on Tuesday afternoon on lower Hasbrouck avenue. It was said that one of the men had approached the other for the price of a drink but was refused. Thereupon he decided to take it by force and might have made good but for the fact that the other was more skilled in the art of self defense. He presented a gory appearance when the battle was over but did not succeed in getting the desired drink.

Miss Schoonmaker's Address.

Miss Catherine Schoonmaker, physical instructor in the local schools, addressed the members of the Poughkeepsie Mothers' Club and their friends at Elsworth School in Poughkeepsie Tuesday afternoon on the work done in Kingston schools. Miss Schoonmaker told of the successful work being done in our schools and an endeavor will be made to have the system established in the Poughkeepsie schools.

At the funeral of Policeman M. J. Leonard, which will be held on Thursday afternoon at his late residence on Henry street officers of the police department will act as bearers. Mr. Leonard would have been twenty years a policeman next month.

Before he was employed for a summer of years at the A. P. Van Buren grocery store at Broadway and Abel street and later engaged in the tea business for himself. The following will act as a guard of honor and pall bearers at the funeral: Chief J. Allan Wood, Charles Phinney, Fred J. Walker, William Readon, Andrew Wainor, James J. Murphy, William Ryan.

Cornelius C. Turner, aged 75 years, died at his late home at Stone Ridge Heights Thursday evening, April 15, at 7:30 o'clock, after a long illness. Mr. Turner was a veteran of the civil war; a private of Captain Murphy's Company E, Second Regiment, Excelsior Brigade, enrolled on the 21st day of June, 1861, and discharged December 29, 1862, at Haywood Hospital by reason of surgeon's certificate of disability. He fought in the following battles, besides many others not named here: Siege of Yorktown, April 1862; battle of Williamsburg, May 5, 1862; battle of Fair Oaks and Chickahominy Swamp, May 31 and June 1, 1862; the seven days' battle beginning on June 26, 1862, including Savage's Station, Malvern Hill, etc., and the second battle of Bull Run, August 28, 1862. Six veterans carried the body of their deceased brother to his last resting place. Mr. Turner was an honest, upright man in all his dealings. A kind husband and father. He will be greatly missed by his relatives and friends. His widow and seven children survive him, Charles and Ira of Stone Ridge, Fred of New York, Sullivan county James of the Peak, William at the old homestead, Ida, widow of the late Elmer Wilkoff of Kripplush, and Emma, wife of Nathan Beatty of Stone Ridge Heights.

"Yes, the same girl."

"Then you have no regrets what ever?"

"I wouldn't say that exactly. If I had it to do over again, I shouldn't be so reckless during my courtship days with promises of the things I would buy for her after marriage. I'd have more common sense and fewer electric motors and fur coats and servants and unlimited charge accounts in my woeing."—Detroit Free Press.

Cynical.

Two actors were discussing their ideas of marriage. At the seventh wedding breakfast of the first actor the other, who had himself been married six times, said:

"Well, old man, I thought you had learned by this time that a marriage is nothing but a sentence of hard labor for life."

"Yes," said the other actor, "but it's a sentence that you can get commuted by bad behavior."—Exchange.

MENKE'S DAILY SPORTING LETTER

(By Frank G. Menke.)

New York, April 21.—One swallow doesn't make the summer but in this town they've come to believe that two victories mean the pennant for those there New York Giants.

The Giants, if you'll think back a bit, won the opening game from Wilbert Robinson's Brooklyn Dodgers. The score was something like 16 to 3. The 16 runs were made mostly on hits. The fact that the club did quite a bit of hitting on that day convinced the rabid Gothamites that the Giants are back with the war clubs this year.

Batting and pitching are the two main essentials for a ball club. As stated, the Giants did some batting in the opener. And now as to pitching? Well, Richard Marquard went into the box the next day and surprised the whole civilized world and part of Brooklyn by shutting out the pesky Dodgers without allowing a hit.

And then the folks on Manhattan Island went into a delirium. What has happened since and what may happen later on doesn't matter. The Giants (according to the rabid) are absolutely certain of competing in the 1915 world series. Didn't they club out 16 runs in one day and didn't Richard pitch air tight ball the next?

Conditions somewhat similar prevail in the dear, old Cleveland, on the banks of Lake Erie. Everybody figured that the Indians were due for a terrific laming every time they ventured into battle. But the Indians tackled the Tigers in the opener and twisted the orange and black tail. And then Cleveland slipped a mental cable and has been thinking pennant thoughts ever since.

Oh, yes, the Indians were trimmed on the second day out, but that doesn't matter with the Clevelanders. They won the opener and they've won other games. Sure, they've lost others too, but what matters that? They've won, haven't they? And now, in the Forest City, where they have hungered in vain for a pennant for 10, these many years, they have come to believe that 1915 will be the year when their hunger is satisfied.

Baseball—Isn't it a funny game?

In keeping with the retrenchment policy, many of the magnates this year have pruned the free list. In other years the clubs slipped season passes to nearly everyone of prominence in the home town, but this year it is different. Season passes were doled out separately and to those only who were of ultra-prominence. Just the ordinary prominent were overlooked.

The belief exists among the magnates that denying passes to the large flock who used to get them before will result in bigger gate receipts. It is figured that the free list crowd of other years now will be forced to pay to see the games and that this will mean several thousand dollars added to the income of each magnate each year.

Another saving that the magnates will make this year is in railroad mileage. They have trimmed all the corners in raking their jumps, thus saving from several hundred to a thousand miles. Each club carries on an average of 21 men on each trip. The mileage averages about 2 1/2 cents when Pullman fare is added. That means it costs a team about 53 cents to travel each mile. If a thousand miles is saved that means a saving of $530 each year for each club, or a total saving of nearly $13,000 annually for the 24 clubs in the big leagues.

Many Saw the School.

Fully six thousand persons took the opportunity of visiting and inspecting the new high school on Broadway on Tuesday afternoon and evening. The building when lighted at night presented a magnificent sight.

THE FILM WAS SHORT.

Why Roosevelt Had to Pose Twice For the Movies.

In the May American Magazine Cleveland Moffett, writing a highly entertaining article entitled, "Deeds of Daring in the Movies," tells several remarkable stories of the adventures of moving picture managers and actors. One of these stories tells how Hal Reid, an actor, persuaded Colonel Roosevelt to pose at Oyster Bay. Reid went down to take the pictures with an assistant, who was an expert at handling the camera. Following is Mr. Moffett's account of what happened:

"The first thing was to get a motion picture of the Colonel coming along the road at a gallop. It would delight people all over the country to see their hero, Rider hero in such spirited action."

"Reid started ahead in the automobile with the assistant and the camera on the back seat. This arrangement made it possible for them to keep just ahead of the Colonel in his dash down the road and get a splendid close-up motion picture showing every detail of horse and rider."

"You can let out your horse as much as you please, sir," said the motion picture man, "as you come up." "I'll let her out," nodded the Colonel and, sure enough, down the level stretch he came sweeping along as if he were charging an army. His horse's flanks and his eyes gleamed in the sun, he smiled fiercely, and waved his slouch hat. In short, everything promised a wonderful picture, when suddenly the assistant, who had been grinding away at the picture machine, stopped abruptly, and turning a frightened face to Reid, said: "The film is out!"

"I could have killed the man when he said that," declared Reid. "I could have killed him right there. Here was my great opportunity spoiled because he had neglected to load the camera properly. The film was out!"

"Hal called to the chauffeur to slow down the automobile, then lifted a hand to the flying rider to pull in his horse."

"What are you stopping for?" shouted the Colonel, as he dashed up. "What's the matter? The mare was going fine."

"Reid explained the trouble while the Colonel listened, purple with anger and his exertions." "This is inexcusable," he said. "This is really inexcusable." Then kicking his horse he rode up to the discomfited assistant and, shaking his riding stick at him, said shrilly: "If there is anything in the world I hate it's a tomfool. It was your business to have plenty of film in that camera, you know it was. Now I'll give you seven minutes to go up to the house and get that film and be back here. Understand me, seven minutes!"

"That assistant was so scared," said Reid, "that he could have swallowed his back hair. He couldn't speak, but he got into the car, and in seven minutes we were back with the film. Believe me, we didn't waste any time. And the Colonel waited for us. He gave us another chance, and there were no more mistakes. We took him on his horse in another gallop, we took him out in the wheat fields showing us his fine crop, and we took him in the house with the sword and pistol that he used at San Juan hill and his regimental colors. I guess they stand as the best motion pictures of Theodore Roosevelt that were ever taken."

COST OF MILK PRODUCTION.

Many Cows Do Not Pay the Expenses of Keeping.

That at least one-eighth of the dairy herds in the state may return as annual net loss to their owners, is indicated in a bulletin just published by the Cornell University agricultural experiment station.

The study upon which the figures are based was carried on in Jefferson county in response to a general demand for information on the cost of producing milk. Year-long records were obtained for 53 dairy herds in the county, which is considered to have more favorable conditions than the average of counties in which the dairy industry is important. Facts were gathered about the quantity and value of milk and butter-fat produced, the profit or losses, and various other items. While 7 of the 53 herds were kept at an aggregate loss of more than $1,300 or an average loss of $190 apiece, the average profit on all herds was 31 cents on the hundred pounds of milk; and the average net profit on each cow in a year was $20.39. These figures indicate that the farmer may make, under favorable conditions, a little less than two-thirds of a cent on a quart of milk.

Cows Above Average.

The bulletin states, however, that most of the cows studied were above the average in production, which resulted in an economy of production; further that the food costs were not much more than half of what they would be in some less favored parts of the state, and that other costs were from twenty to forty per cent less than they might be elsewhere.

Some "Lady Boarders."

The principal cause of loss in dairying is the keeping of cows which do not pay for the food they eat; they have come to be known as "lady boarders" and serve their most profitable use, according to the dairy experts, when converted into meat and hides.

The one way to insure their elimination from the herd, the bulletin says, is to determine the yield of each cow by weight of milk, and by the use of the Babcock test for the butter-fat content. The formation of cow-testing associations is urged upon dairy farmers, and details of their organization and purposes are given. It is announced that copies of this bulletin, number 357, in the Cornell experiment station series, entitled "The Cost of Milk Production," may be secured free on request by residents of New York.

The Corn of Long Ago.

Many ways of cooking corn are known, but the simpler are the better. A sturdy race of pioneers thrived on mush and milk and corn pone and hoe cake. Civilization and luxury have led the children of these pioneers to look with disdain on corn, and to prefer to secure its great health-giving properties through other mediums. We have been taking our corn by way of pork and beef.—Maysville (Ky.) Bulletin.
